Director's Update

The juvenile non-fiction reorganization project is half-way complete and is going very well. The new, simplified labels are much easier to locate and shelve.

With Sam away for college, Fia covering the Friday-Saturday position, and Angie working in the schools, the library is hiring a new substitute.

The library purchased new chairs for the large table in the genealogy section. A donation was made in August for the purpose of making a more accessible space for our book clubs that meet there. We held off until now because we were unsure how things would be set up in that section. The previous chairs were difficult for our older patrons who attend book club to get in and out of, so Ali purchased six new chairs and will be attaching sliders on the feet to make them easier to use on carpet.

Ali attended the Iowa Library Association's annual conference last week. She attended several training sessions: Vibrant Programming for Small Library, Lessons From a Consortium-Led Community Read Program, Digital Safety Lab: Practical Ways to Talk to Patrons About the Scary Parts of the Internet, Fundraising Basics, Activate Your Advocates, and Community Pathways to Accessing Literacy.
